What to do during the summer holidays

All the kids should be off now for the summer holidays and it can be hard to know what to do on a budget and when it is raining and overcast.

At the weekend we took a trip to see family and got to see some horses as my niece is working at a tables and it reminds me how life can fly by seeing my niece show us around and its these little trips that can do wonders to your wellbeing and good to be somewhere different and was free and we will be visiting the south coast of England to see friends we don't often get to see.

WE are staying at a caravan park and yes it was a bit pricy but hearing from other friends we know that live there, it is really good and they have swimming pools there, and I will film part of our trip, and I am really looking forward to it.

If you haven't checked out my Youtube channels then you check these links below:

yesterday we went on a bus ride in London and took a train as my son loves to travel and yes only local places but he doesn't care and we will be doing many more.

Card games are great and reading, along with painting and having a coffee with other mums and families.

Why not camp out in th4e living room or out in the garden and light a bonfire (safely) and tell stories.

It is all about having fun and spending time with those that you love and have summer traditions. Think about all those memories you will be creating so your kids can do the same when they have a family of their own too.
