This is the last week of the Spring term as next week it is half term and I have a couple of birthdays coming and so got to sort this out and then it will soon be the summer holidays.

It means entertaining our children so they don't go mad and neither do we but that it is a well earned break and having lots of fun.

My son had a friend at his school birthday and went to a place called the Guildford Spectrum and it has ten pin bowling, a swimming pool, soft play, climbing and birthday rooms and cafes. First time I had been there and didn't even know this existed, so going to go there again as it was really good fun.

I will be writing blogs and filming as we get nearer the holidays and planning a summer holiday near the English Coast and visit different some places by train and bus rides.

My son goes to a holiday club called Youngstars and loves it but he is getting to the age where he won't be able to go for much longer as it for kids between 3 to 11 years old, if you'd like to check them out, and plan to pay a visit up London and just enjoying this time of the year.

Remember the suncream and water. I like to make sure that there are toilets near by and that there are places to eat or buy food from, as I love Caravan Holidays and so will be checking these out and build memories for my son and forms more friendships and have playdates arranged so he can still stay in touch with friends that he has gotten to know that are in his class but moving onto Secondary School and we have to find a secondary school for my son as he will be moving up to secondary in 2025 to 2026, so are looking around and hopefully find one that will suit him and his needs. It is a hard task but it is all about them moving up and being happy.

So, I hope you enjoy the rest of May and then will be back with a new newsletter in June, so see you then.

Oh I now work on Radio if you'd like to check Epsom Hospital Radio, where I do a show Friday evenings 8 to 10pm.
